

We'd introduce ourselves, but you already know us.

You may not have heard of The Hospital of Central Connecticut. But you probably know who we are because we've been caring for the people of Central Connecticut for more than a century, as New Britain General and Bradley Memorial Hospitals.

On October 1, we merged and became The Hospital of Central Connecticut. We still have both campuses, now known as The Hospital of Central Connecticut at New Britain General and The Hospital of Central Connecticut at Bradley Memorial. And we still have the same services, the same exceptional doctors, nurses and staff. But being a bigger, stronger hospital ensures that we can continue to bring the latest skills, talent and technology right here to your community, where you need them.

So, to put it simply, things are pretty much the same. Only better.
And although you already know us, we're pleased to meet you. Again.

The Hospital of Central Connecticut

at New Britain General and Bradley Memorial

