

Q: What do you get when you merge two great hospitals?

A: An even greater hospital.

For decades, Central Connecticut residents have relied on two great hospitals – New Britain General and Bradley Memorial. Now they can rely on one. On October 1, we merged and became The Hospital of Central Connecticut.

We still have both campuses, which are known as The Hospital of Central Connecticut at New Britain General and The Hospital of Central Connecticut at Bradley Memorial. And we still have the same services, and the same exceptional doctors, nurses and staff. But being bigger and stronger ensures that we can continue to bring the latest skills, talent and technology right here to your community, where you need them.

So, although our name is new, things are pretty much the same. Only better.
And you can count on us for health care that's greater than ever.

The Hospital of Central Connecticut

at New Britain General and Bradley Memorial

